

5th Frankfurt Scientific Symposium

22.10.2005 - 23.10.2005

Is there any progress in alternative publishing? Problems of scholarly information economy

Adam Chesler: Seeking a balanced and sustainable business model for scholarly publishing

Saturday, 22.10.2005

- 10.00 - 10.15 Berndt Dugall: Welcome address
>Michael Olson: Moderation
- 10.15 - 11.00 >David R. Worlock: Scholarly communication - after open access
- 11.00 - 11.45 Richard Wellen: Open access scholarly publishing and the problem of networks and intermediaries in the academic commons
- 11.45 - 12.30 Berndt Dugall: The influence of different boundary conditions including the incentives of the participating actors on the market for scientific information
- 12.30 - 13.15 Marc McCabe: Scholarly communications and the market: Is there room for multiple publishing models?
- 14.00 - 14.45
- 14.45 - 15.30 Rafael Ball: Open Access - neither green road nor golden road. Is this the road to hell?
- 15.30 - 16.15 Jonas Holmström: Open access bibliographical databases - are they a threat, opportunity or even for real?
- 16.30 - 17.15 Jens Redmer: Google's digitisation projects - improving access to information
- 17.15 - 18.00 Alma P. Swan: The scientists who do the research: what are they up to in this new digital scholarly communication world?

Sunday, 23.10.2005

- 9.30 - 10.15 Derk Haank: Commercial publishers in the world of Total Access
- 10.15 - 11.00 Simon Beale: What's on the menu at the soup kitchen?
- 11.15 - 12.00 Hans Robert Cram: Publishing models and the evolvement of scientific communication in the information age
- 12.00 - 12.45 Arie Jongejan: Role of the agent in an age of emerging new publishing models
- 13.30 - 14.15 Ruth Maria Bousonville: Open access and copyright: Who owns the rights?
- 14.15 - 15.00 John Regazzi: A bend in the road: the current state of author pays journals
- 15.15 - 16.00 Sally Morris: What difference does Open Access make?
- 16.00 - 16.45 < Inciting and mandating: how to accelerate the Open Access movement toward its objective
- 16.45 - 17.00 Mike Olson: Closing remarks